

UTS HARVARD REFERENCING SUMMARY

By Dr Laurel Evelyn Dyson, University of Technology, Sydney

Reference List Format

- The Reference List contains all articles cited in your research report or thesis but no others.
- Reference List entries must be listed in alphabetical order by first author's family name.
- All authors must appear in the Reference List entry even if they are abbreviated to 'et al.' (short for Latin 'et alii' – 'and others') in the in-text citation.
- Punctuation and capitalization must be exactly as specified by the UTS Harvard style, not as specified by the original publisher of the article or book.
- Note the difference in capitalization between the names of journals, conferences, newspapers, magazines and websites (every noun, adjective, verb and adverb capitalized) and the names of books, book chapters, journal articles, conference papers, newspaper articles, magazine articles and reports (initial word only capitalized).
- Some details may not always be obtainable. However, you must include enough information for the reader to be able to find the place where you found your information.

Citation Format

- The work of an author must be acknowledged, whether you are paraphrasing the author's work or quoting directly.
- If you do not acknowledge ideas or words that you use, you are guilty of plagiarism.
- You do not need to cite:
 - Your own original ideas
 - Results of your own research
 - If the idea is common knowledge, e.g., All IT professionals are nerds.

The Form of In-Text Citations:

Author's Family Name followed by Year
Nudelman 2011

2-3 Authors:

First, Second & Third Author's Family Names followed by Year
Pachler, Bachmair & Cook 2010

4 or More Authors:

First Author's Family Name et al. followed by Year
Dobrian et al. 2013

Where to Place In-Text Citations:

At the end of the sentence where you have used the information, before the full stop:

The Internet has become an agent for connectivity, not only for mainstream society, but also for many minorities around the world, including Indigenous peoples (Landzelius 2006).

Or, immediately after the author quoted:

Research by Landzelius (2006) shows that the Internet is increasingly an agent for connectivity for many minorities around the world, including Indigenous peoples.

If Using a Direct Quotation:

If you are using a direct quotation, you must give the page number(s):

The number of hits that emerges when the keywords 'indigenous', 'aboriginal' or 'native peoples' are typed into a search engine gives us 'a profile ... of the virtual face of indigeneity' (Landzelius 2006, p. 1).

When No Author is Given:

The exponential growth in the number of people engaged in social networking and other online activity has led to a corresponding rise in cyber espionage ('Foreign cyber-spies' 2009).

When the Author's Name is an Organization which has a Long Name

You may wish to use an acronym, which you must, of course, add to your reference list entry for this article:

Evidence given to the RTIRC (2012) emphasized the reliance that many people in regional areas of Australia placed on their mobile phones, and moreover stressed the urgent need for better mobile phone coverage.

Citing Several Articles at the Same Time

A number of authors have highlighted the importance of opening IT education to Aboriginal Australians (Barlow & de Lacey 1998; Grant, Dyson & Robertson 2010).
